A full slate of pony competition was scheduled for Saturday to crown champion and reserve champion honors in several divisions. The small pony division kicked off the day at 8 a.m. in the Wheeler Ring. Riders are judged on the overall appearance of them and their mounts, as well as their ability to control and guide their partners through the course. The small pony division was followed by the medium pony and then the large pony divisions. Each division was a two round competition that featured a hunter stake round and a handy round. The horse and rider that accumulated the most points across both rounds would be crowned champion.

Top pony competition was on display all day, but a few riders and their mounts stood out amongst the field. Kathryn Padilla, Katherine Mercer and Vivian Golden took home champion honors in the Small, Medium, and Large Pony divisions respectively, and Golden was also crowned the 2023 Devon Grand Pony Hunter Champion aboard Royalist.

Padilla on what she is most excited for at Devon:

"I'm most excited for the Pony Hunt Teams. We're doing The Greatest Showman."

Golden on her performance:

"It was the last round, and I knew I needed to get second or higher to be overall champion and grand champion. So I just needed to go out there and do my best to make that happen."

The juniors were riding alongside the pony division in the Dixon Oval starting Saturday morning at 8:00am. The junior classes were split between the 15 and under and the 16-17 divisions, and then split even further into a small and large class for both age divisions. Similar to the ponies, the riders were challenged to a two round competition that included the stake and handy for each respective division. Expected to perform to top hunter standards, riders were judged on their ability to communicate their mounts throughout each round. Their mounts were judged on several key points including hunting pace, movement, style of jumping, and manners. An overall solid body of work was the goal to accumulate the most points across both rounds in order to take champion honors. After stellar rides all day, Kat Fuqua was crowned the Overall Small Junior Hunter Champion as well as the 2023 Devon Grand Junior Hunter Champion aboard Consent, while Paige Walkenbach rode San Pedro 15 to the Overall Large Junior Hunter Champion honor.

Two other awards were also given out on the day. Ariana Marnell and Babylon won the Angelo Award and Avery Glynn was given the Best Child Rider on a Horse Award on Day Won.

Marnell on Babylon:

"He was awesome. I felt a little pressure from last year because he was Grand Small [champion], so I just wanted to go out and be even better. He loves Devon."

Fuqua on what she liked in particular about the course:

"I thought the whole course was great, but I really liked the third line. It was a bending ten and I didn't have to change anything or adjust, it was just nice and flowing."

Walkenbach riding the course:

"It was super fun. [San Pedro 15] is really green to the hunters; he just started last year. So I was a little nervous about how he would react, but he's an amazing boy and I'm so grateful."

Each year in May, thousands of volunteers come together to staff the Devon Country Fair. It has become one of the largest volunteer run fundraising efforts in the country with the proceeds benefitting Bryn Mawr Hospital.

Saturday was highlighted by the $20,000 Show Jumping Hall of Fame Junior Classic under the lights in the famed Dixon Oval on the grounds of the Devon Horse Show. Thirty horse-and-rider combinations stood at the in gate and prepared to tackle the challenging course and try their hand at the coveted blue ribbon.

Competition kicked off as the sun was setting over the beautiful grounds in Devon, Pennsylvania. The talented group of junior riders were put to the test on a unique course that spanned across every inch of the Dixon Oval. The atmosphere was second to none, as the grand stands were packed with fans excited to witness and exciting class of horse showing.

The class was set to a Table II, 2(a) format which included a first round that saw all thirty partnerships compete, followed by a jump-off for qualified contestants that laid a clear effort in round one. Amongst the field, a total of nine had clear first rounds to move on to the jump off. The first round course saw fifteen total obstacles, including seven oxer jumps, a double combination, a triple combination and an over water jump at the final obstacle. The jump-off track got a little more tactical, reducing the number of jumps but increasing the level of difficulty. In the jump off round, it was a race against the clock to see which combination could put forth a clear rider without sacrificing speed.

Sofia Cady and Zayna Rivzi were very comfortable on the course today, both going clear aboard two different mounts in the first round and advancing to the jump off. The other five jump off contenders were Alexa Elle Lignelli, Tessa Downey, Carolina Signorino, Carlee McCutcheon and Katherine Pugliese.

At the conclusion of the competitive class of junior riders, it was Carlee McCutcheon who continued her winning ways at Devon, this time aboard Coco Mercedes and emerged victorious.

McCutcheon on Coco Mercedes:

"I've been riding her since Wellington; McLain Ward has been helping me with her. She's the most incredible partner I've ever had in the jumper ring. She makes me so brave. She's incredibly fast so I knew this would be a good jump off for her."
